Results compilations like this are only possible thanks to the increasingly efficient work of the local authorities concerned in publishing their results. Bar a few problems results, turnout and electorate figures were, however, promptly and accurately provided in 2018.

I am also immensely grateful to the Local Elections Centre at Plymouth University for providing some historical electoral data used in this publication; and more importantly for the friendship, support, identification of errors and exchange of ideas Professors Michael Thrasher and Colin Rallings of that centre have provided throughout the year. This has enabled me to continue improving the layout and presentation of results.

The by-elections archives maintained by Christopher Keane at englishelections.org.uk, and those by Keith Edkins at gwydir.demon.co.uk/byelections were also vital in ensuring the compilation of two years of by-election results.

Tories struggle to turn Brexit bounce into seats in the giant councils

Most of the national media coverage of the 2018 council elections seemed to focus on contests within London, with only the odd, fleeting reference to events in the key Greater Manchester marginal of Trafford. |

It is true that among the 34 Metcs there were relatively few eye-catching contests to write home about. Yet it is not in London that you find England's true giant councils: It is in Merseyside, South and West Yorkshire, Tyne and Wear, Greater Manchester and the West Midlands. Here are the great cities that do not bear the name "London": Birmingham, Newcastle, Manchester, Liverpool, Sheffield, Leeds and Bradford: cities that drove England's Industrial Revolution and which form the core of Labour's electoral strength.

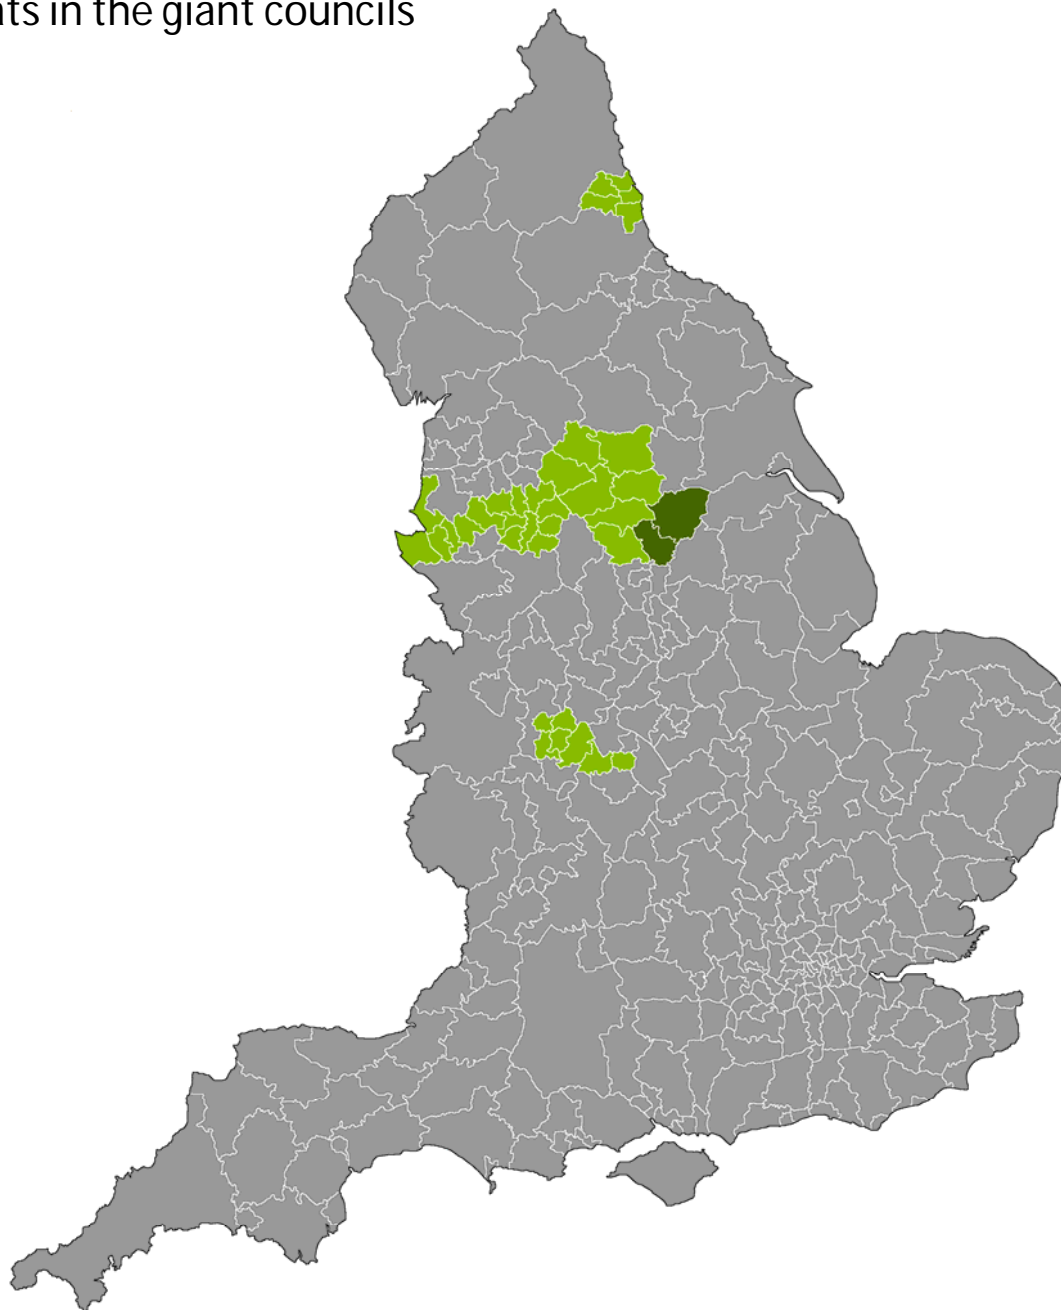

Of the 34 Metropolitan councils, Labour has overall majorities on all but five (Solihull, Dudley, Stockport, Walsall, Trafford).

- X In 24 of those councils Labour holds over 60% of the seats
- X In 19 over 70%
- X In 14 over 80%

There are three where Labour holds more than 90% of the seats: Manchester, Sandwell and South Tyneside). This is almost entirely impregnable Labour territory.

Labour	1,282,924	48.9	+5.9
Conservatives	697,495	26.6	+7.0
Liberal Democrats	308,661	11.8	+2.6
Green	177,901	6.8	+1.2
Independents	85,424	3.3	+1.3
Others	70,639	2.7	-17.8

Table 1: votes cast in 2018

At least, that's true in terms of seats. Not in terms of votes. Don't get me wrong: Labour convincingly wins elections in the Mets; this year leading the Conservatives by over twenty two percentage points - a landslide lead by any measure. But despite its huge lead amongst these councils, a majority of voters did not support Labour.

And why did I include the word "almost" in the sentence "almost entirely impregnable Labour territory"? Because however strong these councils may look for Labour right now, when the party is in government several of these councils have crumbled. By those two measures, Labour's grip in terms of seats looks more impressive than it is - though it is impressive.

As with the non-metropolitan and unitary councils covered in volume three of these results, there was a swing (albeit slightly smaller) to the Conservatives in the Mets as the substantial UKIP vote from 2014 collapsed. As the overall result table above shows, every party gained from UKIP's demise, but the Conservatives most of all. At first glance, this small swing barely materialised in seats won. Labour looks to have been the big gainers on this measurement.

However, four of the largest Mets: Birmingham, Leeds, Manchester and Newcastle, held all-out elections this year following ward boundary reviews, and that massively increased the number of seats electing. In turn, because these four councils have large Labour majorities, all-out elections skew the figures towards Labour.

If we adjust for this bias, counting just the top candidate elected and so replicating as closely as possible how these councils would have voted in a one-third-up election; and remove from the 2014 totals figures for Doncaster and Rotherham which didn't elect in 2018 but did four years earlier, a somewhat different picture emerges.

26 net gains for the Conservatives and 19 net losses for Labour is far closer to how actual votes were cast in 2018, and just as importantly, better reflects the relative position between the two parties. The Conservatives remain heavily under-represented (that is: they have far fewer councillors than their vote share might justify) in the Mets.

It's a problem they have had for decades: their vote in these councils is distributed evenly at a level significantly beneath Labour's. There are very few Met areas - Wirral is one - where their vote is sufficiently concentrated in specific wards to give them significant representation. In fact the problem has been far more pronounced than it is today. In 2000 for example, the Conservatives won 186 seats with 31% while Labour won 439 with 38%. In 1992 the Conservatives actually won more votes than Labour in the Mets: 39.5% to 39.3% yet the Tories won 268 seats and Labour 442. Conservative wards in the Mets have, historically, been far larger than Labour ones - in part because inner city Labour wards have tended to depopulate more quickly than more outlying Conservative seats; but also because the dominant Labour machine wielded a greater influence in early boundary drawing.

Labour's grip on the Mets strengthened in 2018 as they removed the Conservative majority in Trafford and also gained overall control of Kirklees (Huddersfield, Dewsbury, Batley and the Colne Valley). But those achievements were offset by the lost of Labour control if two councils in the West Midlands: Dudley and Walsall.

Table 4: Changes in council control

Apart from the 2015 elections, which occurred on the same day as the general election and so boosted Conservative turnout, Labour's 22.3% lead is the smallest it has been since 2010. The same phenomenon I discuss in the introduction to the third volume of these results: the "Brexit blocking high", asserted itself in the Mets just as it did in provincial England and, in reverse - benefiting Labour - in Greater London.

The Brexit factor was not quite as strong generally in the Mets, in part because UKIP's 2014 vote in the Mets was patchy: strongest in South Yorkshire and the West Midlands; and in specific councils: Bolton, Sunderland and Wigan, for example, in counties in which UKIP was otherwise weak. Rotherham, UKIP's strongest council in 2014, did not vote this year, also obscuring somewhat the impact the party's demise had in these elections.

So, two - possibly three - conflicting factors raged in these elections. Benefiting Labour, the fact that these were mid-term - and mid-term year eight - elections when opposition to the government should be aiding them significantly. Benefiting the Conservatives was the fact that most - no means all, especially in Merseyside, but most - of the Metropolitan district councils voted to leave the EU in the 2016 referendum.

Table 2: vote share by metropolitan county

For those looking for a direct link between Brexit and election results two of the most strongly Leave districts: Dudley and Walsall (both of which voted 68% Leave) were lost by Labour; Trafford, which voted 58% Remain, was lost by the Conservatives. Merseyside, one of the few counties to vote Remain, saw the least Conservative improvement; the West Midlands, one of the most strongly Leave counties, saw the strongest Tory surge.

Don't ascribe too much weight to that link though: Sandwell, which adjoins Dudley and Walsall voted 67% Leave and 100% Labour in 2018; and if Leave were a key driver of votes in these councils the Conservatives should have gained far more seats than they did.

While Merseyside remained anaemic for the Conservatives, there are far deeper reasons for that than Brexit; and despite their poor showing there they performed relatively well in Wirral and Sefton, both Remain-supporting districts. Brexit was a factor, but it was not the factor, or the only factor influencing these results.

Table 1: How the Metropolitan Councils voted in the 2016 EU Referendum: Remain - yellow, Leave - purple

Nonetheless, it was among these councils with their combined millions of voters that Leave won the EU referendum in opposition to what the Labour Party - the party of most of those who voted Leave in these areas - was campaigning for.

One of the key questions of the current political era is to what extent traditional Labour voters in Leave strongholds in the Midlands and North are deserting the party whilst its support base grows in the south and among Remain voters. It's again important to keep Brexit in perspective here: the EU referendum illuminated the problem Labour is having with its traditional base - but it is not a problem purely (possibly not even pre-eminently) concerning Europe.

Nonetheless, it is especially interesting to watch the Mets, given that it was these councils at the forefront of clashes with Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government in the 1980s; which bore the brunt of losing those battles and of the economic overhaul her government oversaw. It's also worth reminding ourselves that Mrs Thatcher won far more seats in the Mets than any of her Conservative successors have; the rot truly set in for the Tories under John Major.

There is some evidence of Labour beginning to experience problems. The evidence is patchy and far from conclusive, but it is there. It exists in the Conservatives winning the West Midlands regional mayoralty in 2017. It is in some spectacular by-election gains by both Lib Dems and Conservatives since the last elections in 2016, and in the fact that the Tories in 2018 polled the sort of vote shares they last won in these councils when they were last in opposition nationally.

Yes, that is because UKIP has lifted them, but only from where they were in 2014: UKIP was not a factor in 2010 and earlier when the Tories were in opposition. What that means is that there is a segment of voters who were not Conservatives prior to the rise of UKIP who have become Conservatives as they have fallen. Some of those will be former Labour voters, though the biggest chunk of UKIP's vote in these councils were former Lib Dem voters voting for the party less because of its national policy stances and more because it was best placed to defeat Labour. When the Liberal Democrats ran Newcastle, Sheffield and Liverpool, Oldham and Rochdale, and had large groups not quite in the majority in Birmingham, St Helens, Manchester, Gateshead, Bradford, Kirklees and Calderdale it wasn't because voters cared about the party's opinions on proportional representation or the EU or human rights; it was because they could defeat unpopular Labour during its mid term doldrums.

UKIP did not leave the Liberal Democrats anything in its will: the party increased its vote by 2.6 points, but only to 11.8% and it lost seats (on the adjusted calculation). That clump of anti-Labour Lib Dem voters who switched to UKIP did not return. The party is still of a convincing, threatening size in Sheffield but that is it. They are being gradually inched out of contention in Stockport, now their strongest (or least weak) Met. They were pushed back in the Leeds North West constituency they held until 2017, losing the Weetwood ward to Labour; and in Bradford East, which they held until 2015. They continue to poll strongly in the Yardley wards of Birmingham - but what good is that when the parliamentary seat now has a 16,000 Labour majority and there are virtually no other Lib Dem councillors in the rest of the city?

There was no recovery in the Tory-facing Mets either: in Solihull they are down to their last couple of wards as the Greens surge past them as the principal opposition there. In Sefton the party was routed in its Stockport redoubt by both Labour and the Tories (though their vote share remained viable). They remain strong in the Hazel Grove section of Stockport but, as with Yardley, there's little sign of that translating into parliamentary votes. The Lib Dems have a scattering of wards across most of the Mets but they are just crumbs - a shadow of the force they once were in these counties.

The Greens had a mixed election - slightly more good than bad. They advanced further in Solihull, gaining Castle Bromwich which has never been other than a safely Conservative ward. They won their first seat ever in Birmingham; and consolidated their hold on the centre of Sheffield, winning three wards there. They held their two in Liverpool and one in Wirral. But they also lost one of their longest-standing wards - Shipley in Bradford, and almost as long-held Farnley & Wortley in Leeds.

But in only four councils did the Green vote share exceed that of the unimpressive Lib Dems - that is in part because the Greens are still not able to field full slates across the Mets, but then nor are the Lib Dems any more. So we have a situation where there is a plurality, but not a majority, still loyal to Labour, and a majority that isn't UKIP, isn't Conservative, isn't Lib Dem, isn't Green and isn't Independent. An apt allegory for the state of politics today: everyone knows what they are against but it's far harder to articulate a positive vision attractive to a mass of others.

During the 2017 general election, before the disasters set in for the Conservative campaign, when the media visited long-term Labour heartlands being targeted by the Tories, they had little trouble finding voters for whom the Miners Strike, the deindustrialisation and the difficulties these communities had adapting to their post-industrial future were distant memories - for younger voters not even memories at all. Plenty, sure, who still cannot bring themselves to vote Conservative because of that legacy; for whom the visceral loathing of that party still remains, but a diminishing number. The 1980s are, after all, 30 years old. We are getting on for two generations beyond that contentious decade.

Brexit is like a glacier carving through rock: its movement barely noticeable but happening nonetheless. London Labour MPs telling voters in Walsall, Wigan and Wakefield, Salford, Sandwell and St Helens, Bolton, Barnsley and Bradford that they got Brexit wrong and that their referendum choice must be overturned, annulled or ignored are hardly helping to make their party look like the political home these voters hundreds of miles from the capital, grew up with Let's not get ahead of ourselves: the only way these small shifts that may be occurring in the Mets will ever become major ruptures will be if the Conservatives return to opposition nationally - and even then, given how poorly the Tories distribute their vote in these councils it still may not be the resurrection the party has waited for decades. But a Conservative Party eight years into government gaining a significant increase in votes in councils like these is unprecedented.

County by county

Greater Manchester

The good, the bland and the ugly is how the range of results in Greater Manchester played out. For the Conservatives, a strong advance in Bolton was dwarfed by a catastrophic election in Trafford where they lost both control and the key marginal wards by a country mile.

There were some other outposts of Conservative success, though these were few and far between. In Bury, rather than gaining the heavily Jewish Sedgley ward as they had in 2006, the Tories rather surprisingly gained Radcliffe North, but lost Ramsbottom ward. Their performance in the wards comprising Bury North constituency was unimpressive. The Conservatives also won both Saddleworth wards in Oldham but made no progress in the wards to the west of the town itself which they can usually win when in opposition.

Labour only ceded one further seat in Manchester itself; all seats up following boundary changes, and whilst the party will be crowing about Trafford they'll be disappointed they made only modest progress in Stockport, the other side of Manchester International airport. They gained Cheadle Hulme North though, so at least another brick in the Lib Dem wall of wards looks like its mortar isn't too secure.

The collapse in UKIP's vote - beyond Bolton a party not especially taken to by Greater Manchester - essentially split equally between Labour and the Conservatives so that, while the Tory vote rose substantially across the county, they were able to make few inroads into the Labour bastions. Hence very little changed anywhere else in terms of seats, though Labour's position in terms of votes is somewhat weaker than it was going into the elections in particular seats.

Merseyside

Labour's strongest metropolitan county - and getting more so by the year; their best results came - again - in Sefton, where they now represent three of the Southport wards for the first time ever. The Conservatives also consolidated a little in Southport which is now a three way marginal seat on the basis of these results. The Conservatives also performed well in Wirral - in particular Wirral West, though Wirral is one of those areas that very much seems much less inclined to Labour locally than nationally.

Knowsley gave Labour a rare, but still rather gentle slap - not only re-electing the Lib Dems in the massive Prescott North ward which covers Knowsley Park, but electing its first Green councillor in Whiston and an independent in Halewood. Labour still polled 66% of the vote across Knowsley as a whole but one wonders if they would have things so easy if the other parties could establish themselves borough-wide. The same could be said even more so about St Helen's where Labour's vote is much weaker: the only borough they polled less than half the votes in.

Liverpool surged past Knowsley in giving Labour its highest vote share in Merseyside - 70.5%, though they were still unable to regain either of the Green Party seats up; the Liberals survived in Tuebrook and the Lib Dems put together a brace of wards in the central-south of the city.

South Yorkshire

Just two of the four the south Yorkshire mets elected in 2018. Doncaster has moved to all-out elections every four years (for some reason slotted into part of the election cycle occupied by the county councils); whilst Rotherham, still reorganising after the intervention of commissioners following the sex abuse scandals there will face new ward boundaries in 2020.

Of the two councils left, Sheffield was the somewhat more interesting psephologically. The Lib Dems performed very strongly in the wards comprising the Sheffield Hallam constituency sending a clear message to Labour and the seat's controversial new MP Jared O'Mara that they were not impressed. But Labour also suffered because of unpopular tree-felling policies and lost a couple of wards they may well not have done otherwise. Even so, Labour's vote was still up 4 percentage points, so they're hardly pariahs in steel city.

In Barnsley the Lib Dems came from literally nowhere to win Penistone East ward. This ward had been voting Conservative for most of the 21st century but the Tories have begun struggling to hold it and, in fact, the Lib Dem gain came from a Labour councillor who had snuck in 2014.

Tyne and Wear

Whisper it softly but the Conservatives didn't do too badly in Tyne and Wear - at least in terms of votes. They benefited far more than Labour from the collapse of UKIP and as this was one of that party's stronger metropolitan counties that improvement was significant: up ten points in both South Tyneside and Sunderland.

Let's not get too carried away though: Labour is in firm charge of all five councils and, as is usual in these wards, the Conservative improvement was even when it needed to be concentrated far more effectively, especially in North Tyneside and Newcastle.

There are a couple of wards in Newcastle that appeared to have voted Conservative in the 2017 general election but despite the opportunity presented of doing likewise in the all-out elections to the city council, voters reverted to the much diminished Lib Dems. The Lib Dems did a little better across the Tyne in Gateshead but that's a council that has never been anything other than Labour and they are still about 30 percentage points behind in vote share, never mind seats.

Labour and the Tories did a swappity-doo in North Tyneside, with the Conservatives winning Monkseaton South for the first time since 2008 whilst losing Monkseaton North for only the third time ever. Meanwhile the Lib Dems, who for some reason mislead the voters by calling themselves "Focus Team" without any reference to their party on the ballot paper, were wiped out.

The Tories gained enough UKIP votes to regain the only ward in South Tyneside they can ever realistically win: Cleadon and East Boldon, but did a bit better in heavily Leave-voting Sunderland. For them to really start making headway in this council they need to be challenging convincingly in the New Town of Washington, but if they keep building in the centre of the city itself then Sunderland Central might be a constituency Labour needs to start worrying about soon. The Lib Dems consolidated two epic by-election wins in Sunderland (see the by-election results towards the back of this volume) but the Tory and Lib Dem councillors still face a massive phalanx of Labour in City Hall.

West Midlands

To offset their loss of Trafford the Conservatives came within a whisker of majority control of Dudley and Walsall in the West Midlands, and are de facto in charge of both councils albeit just without a majority. The collapse of UKIP pushed the Tories up by 19 points in Dudley, gaining them seven seats; and 13 in Walsall, gaining them five. That left Labour in the dust, even though they picked up scraps of UKIP vote that, in other circumstances, would look quite impressive.

In both boroughs the pattern of seat gains reflected the evolving electoral dynamic: Labour's Walsall gains came in Walsall North and Aldridge-Brownhills wards whilst they made no headway at all in wards they used to be able to win frequently in Walsall South - wards like St Matthews and Pleck, which are increasingly heavily Asian. Likewise, while they made a bit of headway in Ian Austin's Dudley North the Conservatives couldn't win a majority of votes there, while Dudley South continues to look like a fairly safe Tory seat (Halesowen & Rowley Regis and Stourbridge less so).

Birmingham underwent major boundary changes prior to these elections: changes constructed on the back of an "Emperor's new clothes" administrative review that wasted a lot of money spouting utter nonsense about the most effective council size for a city as big as this. Gone are all the three member wards Birmingham was used to and in came forty-plus one and two member wards electing 101 dalmati...sorry, councillors.

Both Labour and the Conservatives increased vote share roughly equally so the council broadly retained the same proportions of councillors as existed prior to the boundary review; though Labour consolidated in Sutton Vesey, the Conservatives again did quite well in Erdington, and a Green councillor was elected in the rather mystical-sounding Druids Heath and Monyhull ward.

That Green gain came just across from what are increasingly looking like Green fortresses in Shirley, Solihull. To them the Greens won a thumping victory in the far north of this oddly shaped district - in Castle Bromwich, which has never been other than very safely Conservative. There are now ten Green councillors in Solihull: the principal opposition group there by some margin, though the Conservatives still enjoy a comfy majority.

Nothing hugely noteworthy happened in Coventry, Sandwell or Wolverhampton though the result in Coventry's St Michael's ward surely put paid to former Militant MP Dave Nellist's impressive electoral run - he polled just 13% to Labour's 72% there.

West Yorkshire

The Conservative loss of Trafford stole a lot of the oxygen of publicity from Labour's gain of Kirklees council - England's largest council that is not a city. As long as they can keep together their two blocs of wards: one in Batley and Dewsbury; the other in Huddersfield and the more urban parts of Colne

Valley they should now be able to enjoy majority control...at least until they get back into power nationally.

Labour also did impressively in Calderdale, Kirklees' northern neighbour, and should be able to take control there in 2019 (especially as 2015 was a very good year for the Conservatives).

Labour did ok in Bradford, seizing one of the most long-standing Green Party wards on the outskirts of Shipley; and lost a little ground following boundary changes in Leeds - though nothing they need to worry about too much. They might be a little more concerned at the steady, if unspectacular, erosion of their support in Wakefield: both the town and the wards that it contributes to the Morley and Outwood constituency swung to the Conservatives.

It's quite hard to tell from local election results how the parties are performing across this key constituency as a whole because Morley routinely chooses independent local councillors, but the Conservatives got quite close in the one other Leeds ward that is allotted to this constituency: Ardsley and Robin Hood.

This table excludes changes from Birmingham because the council underwent boundary changes which reduced the size of the council and made direct ward-for-ward comparisons impossible. For this reason the change figures shown here differ from those in the tables in the introduction.

Guide to results

The results are presented alphabetically but by metropolitan county, so Bolton is the first council as it is the first council within Greater Manchester - the first county alphabetically.

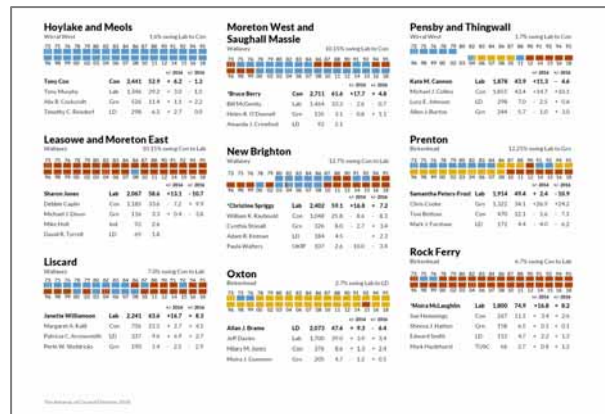

Each set of results follows a standard format. There is a frontsheet with the topline council result, its change status, and a ward map. The change status contains three boxes per party: on the top line a box showing the seats won at this election and one showing the total number of seats that party holds on the council. Underneath is a box showing the gains or losses figure. There is also an "at a glance" feature where every council seat is represented. This shows every year of the electoral cycle.

Year	Conservative	Labour	Lib Dem	Residents Association	Independents	UKIP	Green	Other
2018	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
2015	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
2012	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
2009	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
2006	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
2003	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
2000	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1997	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1994	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1991	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1988	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1985	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1982	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1979	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1976	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0
1973	7	21	12	39	2	5	0	0

If there have been boundary changes there will then be a page showing the old and new ward maps. The next table shows the headline electoral statistics for the council for every year it has held elections back to its formation in 1973.

There then follow the ward-by-ward election results. These include the vote, percentage vote and two percentage change figures. The first: the change from 2014 is the more pertinent as it was the election this particular seat was last contested. It is the result from which the swing calculation is derived. I also provide the change figures from 2016: the most recent election in the ward, though for a different seat.

I provide a vote share for every candidate. Most councils that elect by thirds have just one vacancy making for a straightforward calculation. But where there have been boundary changes the whole council is up for election creating, in most cases, multi-member vacancies. The highest vote method cannot provide percentage vote shares for individual candidates, so I prefer the average vote method, which requires an adjustment when each party or interest fails to stand a full slate of candidates. This adjustment ensures that the total vote shares equal 100% and, I believe, better reflects the true standing of a party than simply taking the top candidate's share, which may be distorted by a personal vote.

Above the result is a coloured "history bar" that denotes which party has won each seat in each ward at each election back, where possible, to the first election of these councils (in their current form) in 1973. Where it is not possible to trace a ward's lineage back that far, it starts from whichever election I have found it credible to begin from.

Most of the colours are self-explanatory: blue for Conservative, red for Labour, yellow for Lib Dem, green for Greens and purple for UKIP. Independents are represented by olive and brown denotes Residents Association - a catch-all category which I use to define any candidate representing an organised faction which describes itself as non-partisan. Occasionally there are other colours used: dark red normally means independent Labour. Dark blue usually denotes independent Conservative. There are others - please refer to the historic election results files on the Elections Centre website if you want to find out the specific link.

I also record which constituency/ies the ward lies within.

Following the results there is a comparison table that shows each party's average vote share over the electoral cycle: usually 2014, 2015, 2016 and 2018. Where there have been boundary changes in any of these years the cycle starts from that year. This table also shows the results for wards that did not elect this year. The table shows every party or interest that stood in either election.

There is then a table showing the percentage vote each party has won in every ward in the council going back to 1973. This is similar to the table in the Greater London results volume but, because there have been annual elections for these councils there are far more results to record.

The final pages of each council's results show year-by-year political maps for the authority. With the exception of Birmingham, for which every result is provided back to 1973, the maps regress to the first boundary review that council underwent, which usually means somewhere from 1980-1982.

To the back of this book can be found every by-election that occurred within these councils between 2016 and 2018, the results broken down into parliamentary constituency and an index of every candidate who stood in 2018.

Boundary changes

The boundary changes in Manchester were relatively minor, essentially to address the rapid population growth in the city centre, and the relative decline of slightly further outlying areas.

The old City Centre ward was split in two, with Deansgate being that ward's most natural successor, and a new Piccadilly ward created to its east. As the overall size of the city council remained the same, at 92 councillors, one ward elsewhere had to be abolished and, whilst there was some considerable churn rippling out from the centre to accommodate the new ward, the most obvious "victim" was Gorton South. There is now just one ward covering Gorton proper.

The former wards of Ancoats and Clayton and Bradford, which ran north and south of each other, became two east-west wards: Ancoats and Beswick (which kept somewhat more of Ancoats and Clayton) and Clayton and Openshaw (the more natural successor to Bradford). The old ward had some fairly odd-looking boundaries, which the new Piccadilly ward has helped improve somewhat.

Beyond these north-central changes the ward pattern was left largely unchanged with only minor alterations to better balance electorate changes.

All wards remain three-member.

Boundary changes

Birmingham, England's largest council, has gone from 40 massive three-member wards to 69 single- and two-member wards (37 two-member, 32 single member) for a reduced council size of 101. This reduction in council size means, of course, that whilst the size of Birmingham's wards now more closely resemble the size of some of the larger London boroughs or English cities, the number of electors each councillor represents has increased. It will also be much harder for less active councillors, especially those in single-member wards, to avoid their fair share of work, though whether this will have any impact on electoral outcomes for them remains to be seen.

Because the overall council size has reduced it's hard to point to areas of electorate growth or decline; though the boundary review was ordered not because the old wards excessively deviated from the mean number of electors they should have; but because a review of governance in the city recommended a reduction in council size.

Boundary changes

Leeds underwent relatively minor ward boundary changes, principally to address depopulation in the central wards. No wards were abolished and none were created; just boundaries slightly redrawn.

The following are by-elections that were held on the same day as the council elections on 3rd May. For the purposes of distinguishing the by-election candidates they are those who polled the fewer votes where two candidates were nominated by a party. Where only one stood, that candidate is deemed as contesting the normal vacancy rather than the casual vacancy.
